BRAND AND BUSINESS FOUNDATION

Business Scope

A working definition of what Verimarts is, who it serves, and how the business can grow. This document captures the current concept and identifies decisions to confirm with the client.

Document status

Concept draft for discussion. The business name, initial visual palette, and automotive website direction have been established. Operational details such as inventory model, vehicle sourcing, location, warranties, and delivery must be confirmed by the business owner before publication.

1. Business concept

Verimarts is an automotive retail brand with a digital showroom where prospective buyers can discover available vehicles, review clear vehicle information, and contact the business directly to continue an enquiry. The website's first release supports discovery and lead generation; the sale conversation and any payment arrangements happen directly between the buyer and the business.

Current phase: a trustworthy vehicle catalogue and enquiry experience. The website does not accept payments or place orders.

2. Scope of the business

The initial business scope is vehicle sales and customer enquiries. The following adjacent activities are options for the business to confirm, rather than services to advertise automatically:

Area	Initial interpretation	Confirm before claiming
Vehicle sales	Promote vehicles available for sale through a showroom-style catalogue.	New, used, imported, locally sourced, or a mix; ownership and stock status.
Vehicle sourcing	Potentially help a buyer find a vehicle that is not currently listed.	Whether sourcing is offered, its process, fees, and delivery expectations.
Customer assistance	Answer questions and arrange follow-up through WhatsApp or other agreed channels.	Contact hours, inspection/test-drive availability, and service area.
After-sales support	May be introduced later if the business offers it.	Warranty, servicing, financing, trade-ins, registration, and delivery terms.

3. Intended customers

The primary audience is people researching a vehicle before they are ready to speak with a seller. The site should support both mobile-first browsing and buyers who want to compare practical details before making contact. Likely audiences include:

- Private buyers looking for a car for personal or family use.
- Business buyers looking for vehicles for staff, operations, or fleet needs, if the business serves them.
- Specific-vehicle shoppers who want a particular make, model, body type, or price range.

4. Customer value and brand promise

The website should make vehicle discovery feel clear and direct. Verimarts should present accurate listings, useful photos, transparent prices where approved, and a simple path to ask questions. Avoid unsupported claims such as “certified,” “guaranteed,” “best price,” or “fully inspected” unless the business can substantiate them.

Brand direction

Name: Verimarts. Visual palette: racing red #FF0000, black #000000, and silver grey #C0C0C0. The intended character is confident, automotive, and energetic, with the cars—not decorative effects—remaining the main focus.

5. Sales journey in the initial phase

Step	Buyer experience	Business role
Discover	Browse featured and available vehicles.	Provide current, approved vehicle information and images.
Evaluate	Open a vehicle page and review price, specifications, condition notes, and gallery.	Answer questions accurately and disclose availability changes.
Enquire	Tap WhatsApp or call to discuss the vehicle or arrange a visit.	Continue the conversation and explain the next steps.
Complete offline/directly	Buyer and business arrange inspection, negotiation, paperwork, and payment directly.	Handle transaction, records, and payment outside this MVP website.

6. Operating principles

- Accuracy: listings should show an updated availability status and avoid invented specifications.
- Clarity: distinguish confirmed vehicle facts from estimates or seller-provided notes.
- Trust: show real contact details, business location/service area, and clear enquiry expectations once supplied.
- Privacy: WhatsApp enquiries open the customer’s messaging app; the MVP should not collect or store form data on a server.
- Maintainability: keep vehicle information in a structured source so a backend catalogue can replace it later without rebuilding the presentation layer.

7. What is outside the current business website scope

- Online checkout, deposits, card/bank payments, or payment processing.
- Order placement, reservations, purchase contracts, or automated sales confirmation.
- Customer accounts, saved searches across devices, CRM, or admin dashboards.
- Live inventory feeds, automated vehicle valuation, financing approval, or loan calculators.
- Claims about inspection, warranties, delivery, trade-ins, or sourcing until confirmed.

8. Future growth options

After the catalogue and enquiry journey are validated, Verimarts may add a secure inventory manager, availability updates, lead management, saved vehicles, financing information, inspection booking, and online payments. Each should be scoped separately with the client and introduced only when operational processes are ready.

9. Decisions to confirm with the client

Decision	Why it matters
Vehicle segment and stock model	Sets the catalogue categories, listing language, and customer expectations.
Business location and service area	Supports local trust, contact details, and inspection arrangements.
Pricing and availability policy	Determines whether prices are public and how sold/pending vehicles are handled.
WhatsApp number and enquiry owner	Ensures each enquiry reaches the correct person and opens a useful prefilled message.
Verified services and policies	Prevents inaccurate claims about warranties, inspections, sourcing, finance, or delivery.

Working principle: launch a focused digital showroom that helps people make an informed enquiry, then expand the business systems when the client is ready.
